Top 3 Things Parents Can Do to Help Their Children Be Successful in School (and Life)

1. Allow your children the opportunity to learn from their mistakes whenever possible. Natural and logical consequences are the most effective forms of discipline a parent can provide. They are also how life's greatest lessons are learned!
2. "Every day a little play." Find time to enjoy your children's unique interests and abilities.
3. Help your children find things they're good at or really like to do. Support them in these activities from an early age on. This helps build self-esteem and lessens the likelihood of juvenile delinquency and other problems later on.
